Project Partnership History

Project Partnership has evolved over the past 30 years to the political and military needs of the United States Army in Europe. It became an official program in 1968. It purpose is to increase the personal and professional contacts between United States and Allied Soldiers. In 1978, the emphasis of the program shifted to increasing interoperability, but it retained the goal of increasing contact between United States and Allied soldiers. The program continues this vital role as we enter a period in which United States Army, Europe and Seventh Army divisions operate in multi-national corps
